God is our refuge and strength, an ever present help in trouble, in trouble
God is our refuge and strength, an ever present help if trouble, in trouble

Therefore we will not be afraid for God is near

God is our refuge and strength, an ever present help if trouble, in trouble

Therefore we will not be afraid for He is near

God is our refuge and strength, an ever present help in trouble, in trouble
God is our refuge and strength, an ever present help if trouble, in trouble

Therefore we will not be afraid for She is near

Note: The original title of this song is "For He Is Here," and "He" was initially the only pronoun used for the Divine in this song. Troy Hatfield's simple demo of the song was recorded this way. But Troy is wide open to including additional pronouns and so these have been added. We suggest you use whatever pronouns or words are most meaningful and heartfelt to you. Troy also has a very thoughtful take on the whole issue of inclusive language that will be featured in our blog in September, 2016.
