Come, gather at this table, let everyone come near.
Let no one be rejected, let no one come in far.
The wine of sweet communion shall be poured out like grace
For Christ's dear bride is joyful and joy shall fill this place.

Come, bring your jars of water from each heart's deepest well;
And see the transformation of which our stories tell.
These simple jars of water shall soon enough become
The wine of joyful union that welcomes strangers home.

This world is deep in anguish, each new day brings a sign.
This world is dry and thirsty and who can find the wine;
The wine that brings us gladness, that draws us near in peace;
Preparing for that feat day when war and troubles cease.

Fear not to bring your water and doubt not but believe.
The wine it is becoming, can thirst and pain relieve.
So, go prepare a table for paupers and for kings,
And let this be your anthem; we're bound for greater things.
